A Complete Guide to Multilevel Writing

The writing paper explained part by part, with official band descriptors, a marked script and ten full practice exercises — each with model answers and an English–Uzbek word list.

10 exercises | 30 model answers | 400 words & phrases | Band descriptors | Uzbek support

WHAT YOU WRITE

One situation, two emails — then an online discussion post.

TASK 1.1	TASK 1.2	TASK 2
50	120–150	180–200
words · informal	words · formal	words · discussion

How to use this book

Every exercise follows the same six-page cycle. Work through it in order — the model answers only help once you have written your own.

1 · Read the situation. One prompt letter sets up all three tasks. Underline what you are being asked to do — most lost marks come from missing a question, not from weak English.

2 · Write Task 1.1 (about 50 words). A message to a friend. Informal, warm, and it must still answer the task.

3 · Write Task 1.2 (120–150 words). The same situation in a formal email. Keep the register consistent from first line to signature.

4 · Write Task 2 (180–200 words). An online discussion post: take a clear position, support it, and close it properly.

5 · Compare with the model answers. Do not copy them. Look at how each one is organised and what language carries the argument.

6 · Learn the word list. Twenty words and phrases per task, with Uzbek translations, taken from the models themselves.

WORD COUNT

Examiners do not reward extra length. A 260-word Task 2 is not a better Task 2 — it is an unfinished one that ran out of control.

REGISTER

The single most common fault is a formal email that slips into chat ("Hi there", "Thanks a lot!") halfway through. Choose a register and hold it.

EXAMINER'S MARKS

Task 1.1

Hi Ben,

Did you hear the club is closing for a month? I'm really disappointed — we'll miss our workouts! I think they should offer online classes or outdoor group sessions during the break. Also, it'd be great if they improve the showers and maybe add more space in the stretching area.

Take care,

Nico

EXAMINER'S COMMENT

The response is beyond level B1.

Task 1.2

Dear Manager,

Thank you for your email. Even I understand that the building needs some repairs and new equipment, I was a bit disappointed to hear that the fitness club will be closed for one month. I usually come a few times a week, so it's an important part of my lifestyle.

I would like to suggest some improvements. The changing rooms are sometimes too small and not very clean, so maybe they can be repaired. It would be also nice to have more fitness classes in the evenings when most people can come.

Thank you for listening to our opinions. I hope to return to club soon.

Best regards,

Nicolas Tedros.

EXAMINER'S COMMENT

The response is on topic, but the questions are not fully addressed.

The register is appropriate. A range of complex structures are used.

Vocabulary is sufficient to discuss the topics. Errors in grammar and word choice do not cause misunderstanding.

Some cohesive devices and referencing are used to connect sentences.

Task 2

I think living in a small town is better than living in a big city, even if both have some advantages. In my opinion, small towns are more calm and people can live there with less stress. There is not so much noise and traffic like in big cities, so it's easier to relax and enjoy free time. Also, the air is more clean and the nature is closer, which is good for health.

Another reason is that people in small towns usually know each other and are more friendly. There is a stronger feeling of community, and it's easier to make friends. For example, in my town I often meet people I know when I go outside.

Of course, big cities offer more job opportunities and better education. You can find more shops, cinemas, and restaurants there. But I think life in a city can be very fast and tired. It's not easy to find a silent place or to have time for yourself.

In conclusion, I prefer to living in a small town because the life is easier and more peaceful. I know that some people choose big cities, but for me, small town gives better quality of life.

The response is relevant and the stance is clear.

A range of complex structures are used. Vocabulary is sufficient to discuss the topics.

Errors in grammar and some awkward usage of vocabulary do not cause misunderstanding.

Clear structure with some use of connectors and logical flow.

OVERALL SCORE	STANDARD SCORE	LEVEL

WHAT THIS SCRIPT TEACHES YOU

- Task 1.2 lost marks for coverage, not for language: the letter answers only part of what the manager asked. Always check how many questions the prompt contains.
- Task 2 scored 4 rather than 5 because of awkward word choice ("life in a city can be very tired", "I prefer to living"), not because of the ideas.
- Neither script is perfect English. Band 4–5 answers still contain small errors; what matters is that the errors never stop the reader understanding.

TASK 1.1 · INFORMAL

about 50 words

Hi Jack,

Did you get the email? The library is closing for two weeks for renovations. I'm really disappointed, because I have just started a new series. I think they should set up a small shelf in the community hall so that members can still borrow books. What do you think?

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear Head Librarian,

Thank you for letting us know about the upcoming renovations. I understand that the building needs to be upgraded, but I must admit that I feel disappointed, because the library is an important part of my week and two weeks is a long time without it.

I would like to suggest a few things. Firstly, it would help enormously if members could borrow extra books just before the closure. Secondly, a temporary collection in the community hall would keep the service running for readers who cannot afford to buy books.

Finally, when the library reopens, I would love to see more e-books and audiobooks, as well as evening workshops or author talks. Clear updates about the reopening date would also be very welcome.

Yours sincerely,

Alex

PART 2

"What are the advantages and disadvantages of online learning compared to traditional classroom learning?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

That is a very relevant question, and having studied in both ways, I can see clear advantages and disadvantages.

The biggest advantage of online learning is flexibility. You can open the materials whenever your schedule allows, which is invaluable if you are working or looking after a family. You can also repeat a difficult explanation as many times as you need, which is impossible in a live class. In addition, the range of resources available online, from interactive exercises to huge digital libraries, is far wider than any single classroom can offer.

On the other hand, a traditional classroom offers a social dynamic that is hard to reproduce on a screen. Face-to-face contact with the teacher and the other students produces immediate feedback and spontaneous discussion, and this really does increase both understanding and motivation. Group activities in a real room fix new vocabulary in your memory in a way that breakout rooms rarely do, and studying alone online can feel isolating.

Overall, I believe the best solution is a blended approach that combines the convenience of online resources with the human contact of the classroom.

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my enthusiasm about the plans for a new community park in our neighbourhood. This is a wonderful opportunity to improve our local environment and to bring neighbours together.

To make the park useful for everyone, I would like to suggest several features. Firstly, walking and cycling paths would encourage outdoor exercise at any age. Secondly, picnic areas with tables and benches would give families somewhere to gather, and a fenced playground would offer a safe space for small children.

Finally, I hope you will plant native trees and shrubs, which would both beautify the park and support local wildlife. Thank you for consulting residents, and I look forward to seeing the project take shape.

Yours faithfully,

Alex

Exercise 2 · Model answer

PART 2

"Is technology making our lives better or worse?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

Technology is a much debated subject, and in my view its effect on our lives is neither entirely good nor entirely bad.

On the positive side, technology has clearly improved our quality of life. Medical advances have produced better treatment, and telemedicine now allows patients in remote areas to consult a doctor without travelling for hours. Communication has been transformed as well: social platforms keep us in touch with relatives abroad, and online courses have opened education to people who could never have attended a university in person.

There are, however, real costs. Constant use of smartphones and social media is linked to isolation and anxiety, particularly among teenagers who compare themselves with everyone they see on a screen. Automation is also replacing familiar jobs faster than workers can retrain for new ones. Perhaps most worrying of all, the sheer volume of information online makes it harder, not easier, for people to tell what is actually true.

Ultimately, I would argue that technology itself is neutral and that the outcome depends on how carefully we use it. If we set sensible limits and invest in retraining, the benefits will clearly outweigh the drawbacks.

TASK 1.1 · INFORMAL

about 50 words

Hi Jack,

Did you read the message from HR? They are planning a proper welcome for new staff. I think it is a great idea. I hope new people get a friendly colleague to show them around and a team lunch in their first week, so nobody has to eat alone on day one.

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear HR Department,

Thank you for your message about improving the welcome our new colleagues receive. I fully support the plan, as a good start makes a real difference to how quickly someone settles in.

I would like to suggest three practical steps. Firstly, a buddy system, in which an experienced colleague guides a new starter for the first few weeks, would give them someone to ask the small questions they may hesitate to raise with a manager. Secondly, a team lunch in the first week would make introductions easy and relaxed.

Finally, please make sure that a desk, a computer and all the necessary access are ready before the first day, together with a clear timetable for that week.

Yours faithfully,

Alex

PART 2

"Are celebrities good role models for young people?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

Whether celebrities make good role models is, in my opinion, a question with no single answer: some certainly do, and many clearly do not.

On the positive side, a number of well-known figures use their fame responsibly. Some campaign for environmental causes or fund educational charities, and an actor who speaks publicly about the value of reading can persuade thousands of teenagers to open a book. Athletes are often even more convincing, because the dedication and discipline behind their success are visible to everyone.

However, the opposite is equally common. The lifestyle presented on many celebrity accounts is extravagant and encourages young people to measure themselves by possessions and appearance. This creates expectations that ordinary life can never satisfy, and the scandals that follow some famous names set a poor example to an audience still too young to judge what it sees critically. Teenagers are particularly vulnerable here, because the people they admire are presented to them as polished images rather than as real human beings.

For that reason, I would say that celebrities can be role models, but young people should look past the glamour and follow the actions rather than the image.

Hi Jack,

Did you see the head teacher's message about improving the school? I think it is a really good idea. I am hoping for better resources in the classrooms and a quiet room where students can work or just calm down at break. Shall we write our suggestions together?

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear Head Teacher,

Thank you for your message about improving our school environment. I fully support the initiative and believe it is an excellent opportunity to make the school better for students and staff alike.

To support students, I would suggest creating designated quiet zones where they can study independently or simply rest during breaks. Investing in interactive learning tools and replacing the oldest classroom furniture would also improve concentration and comfort noticeably.

For teachers, clearer communication channels and a proper staff room for planning and short breaks would be extremely welcome. Simplifying our administrative paperwork, perhaps through better digital tools, would free up time for teaching itself. I would be glad to help develop any of these ideas.

Yours sincerely,

Alex

PART 2

"What do you think about the impact of social media on young users?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

Social media has become part of daily life for almost every teenager, and I believe its influence is genuinely double-edged.

On the one hand, these platforms give young users real opportunities to connect. They keep friendships alive, share experiences and join communities that would be impossible to find in a small town. Instagram and TikTok also allow them to express their creativity and show talents to an audience, which can build confidence and a clear sense of identity. For teenagers who feel different from everyone around them, finding others with the same interests online can be genuinely important.

On the other hand, the risks cannot be ignored. The pressure to present a perfect image online leads many young people to feel inadequate, and research has repeatedly linked heavy use to anxiety and low self-esteem. Cyberbullying is a further danger, and its emotional effects can last for years. The design of these apps makes matters worse, since they are deliberately built to hold attention for as long as possible.

In conclusion, while social media offers valuable chances to connect and create, it also threatens well-being. Young users need to use these platforms thoughtfully and keep a healthy balance with real-world life.

Hi Jack,

Have you read the manager's email? The club is closing for a whole month. I am quite disappointed, because I train there three times a week. I think they should run outdoor sessions in the park so that we keep our routine. Would you come to those?

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear Manager,

Thank you for telling us about the temporary closure of the fitness centre. I understand that the repairs and the new equipment are necessary, but I must admit that I am disappointed, as training here is an important part of my week.

You asked what else should change. In my opinion, the changing rooms need attention most: they are small and often untidy. I would also welcome more classes in the evening, when most members are free. A few members have also mentioned that the equipment in the free-weights area is often left untidy.

As for the closing month, outdoor group sessions in the park or online training videos would keep us motivated. Regular updates on the progress of the work would also be appreciated.

Yours faithfully,

Alex

PART 2

"Is it better to live in a big city or a small town?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

Both big cities and small towns have their attractions, but on balance I believe a big city offers more for someone at the start of their career.

The first reason is opportunity. Cities contain far more employers, and a person working in a specialised field has a realistic chance of finding the right job. Someone interested in technology, for example, will find many more openings in a city than in a provincial town.

The second reason is variety. Museums, theatres, concerts and restaurants from a dozen countries are all within reach, and this constant contact with different cultures broadens the way you think. A city also exposes you to ideas and people you would simply never meet at home.

Of course, city life has a price. Housing is expensive, the streets are noisy and the pace can be exhausting, whereas a small town offers calm and a genuine sense of community. Many people also find that neighbours in a small town know and help one another in a way that rarely happens in a city block.

In the end the choice depends on your stage of life, but for those seeking growth, the city is usually the better option.

Thank you for your letter about my recent stay at the Grandview Hotel. I appreciate that you have acknowledged the noise and the problem with the air conditioning rather than dismissing my complaint, and I am glad to hear that the faults are being dealt with.

I am also grateful for the offer of a complimentary night in a newly renovated room. It is a generous gesture and I would like to accept it. It shows that you take guest comfort seriously, and that is why I will be happy to stay with you again.

I intend to return within the next three months and will contact the reception to arrange a suitable date. I would simply ask that the room be on a quiet floor, away from the lift.

Exercise 6 · Model answer

PART 2

"What are the reasons for air pollution?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

Air pollution affects almost every large city in the world, and in my view three causes stand out.

The first is industry. Factories release large quantities of harmful gases and fine particles while they are producing goods, and in countries with heavy manufacturing, such as China and India, air quality falls sharply around industrial areas.

The second cause is transport. Vehicles burning petrol and diesel emit carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides, and where traffic is dense these gases form the smog that triggers breathing problems. Los Angeles and Mexico City are well-known examples of cities where the sheer number of cars damages the air.

The third cause is domestic. Burning wood or coal for heating and cooking fills the air with smoke and toxic substances, a practice still common in many developing countries and a serious risk to the families concerned. Rural households are often the hardest to reach with cleaner alternatives, because wood and coal remain the cheapest fuel available to them.

Industry, transport and household fuel are therefore the main culprits, and tackling all three is essential if air quality and public health are to improve.

TASK 1.1 · INFORMAL

about 50 words

Hi Jack,

Big news at work: HR is going to let some people work from home. I am really pleased, because the daily commute takes two hours of my life. I hope they include my department, as I concentrate far better at my own desk. How does it work at your office?

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear HR Manager,

Thank you for your letter about the new policy on working from home. I welcome the decision and believe it can benefit both staff and the company.

For employees, the clearest gain is time. Without a long commute, people arrive at work rested, and many of us concentrate better at home, where there are fewer interruptions than in an open-plan office. For the company, that usually means higher productivity, better morale and lower office costs.

I would therefore like to ask that my own role be considered for the scheme. Most of my work is done on a computer, and with a reliable internet connection and a weekly team meeting I am confident I could do it just as effectively from home.

Yours faithfully,

Alex

PART 2

"Why is the crime rate increasing among teenagers?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

The rise in crime among teenagers is a serious problem, and I do not think a single cause can explain it.

One factor is the influence of the internet. Young people are exposed to violent material long before they are mature enough to judge it, and constant exposure can make aggression look ordinary rather than shocking.

A second and probably stronger factor is social and economic. Poverty, unstable homes and the absence of adult supervision create exactly the conditions in which crime grows. A teenager from a disadvantaged background who sees no realistic future may turn to theft out of desperation rather than choice. Where a family is struggling simply to pay for food and rent, children are often left to supervise themselves for most of the day.

A third factor is untreated mental illness. Depression and anxiety that nobody notices can express themselves as anti-social or destructive behaviour. Boys in particular are far less likely than girls to ask for help when something is wrong.

In short, the problem has several roots and will not be solved by punishment alone. Support for struggling families, better schooling and real opportunities are all part of the answer.

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear Mr Edward,

Thank you for your letter about the noise from my flat last night. I am sorry that my guests disturbed you and your family. I had not realised how clearly the sound carries through the building, and it was certainly never my intention to cause you any trouble.

I would like to assure you that it will not happen again. In future I will keep gatherings smaller and quieter, turn the music off by ten o'clock, and let you know in advance whenever I am expecting visitors. I have also spoken to the two families on my floor so that they know they can contact me directly if anything disturbs them.

I value good relations with my neighbours and I hope this letter puts the matter right.

Yours sincerely,

Alex

Exercise 8 · Model answer

PART 2

"Should students be banned from using smartphones at school?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

Whether smartphones belong in school is a question that divides parents and teachers, and I would argue for clear rules rather than a complete ban.

There is no denying that phones distract. A screen lighting up with notifications makes it almost impossible for a teenager to follow the lesson, and we have all seen students scrolling through social media while the teacher is explaining something important. That constant temptation genuinely damages learning.

However, a smartphone is also a powerful tool. Dictionaries, research sites, language apps and digital textbooks all sit in a student's pocket, and banning the device removes those opportunities along with the distraction. A student who has forgotten a word can look it up in seconds instead of losing the thread of the lesson entirely.

The sensible answer, in my opinion, lies between the two positions. Phones should be put away during direct teaching and brought out only for specific tasks the teacher has set. Schools should also teach responsible digital habits, because students will carry those habits long after they leave the classroom. A blanket ban also teaches nothing: it simply removes the device without ever showing young people how to manage it sensibly.

PART 2

"Should children learn a foreign language from the time they start school, or is it better to wait until secondary school?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST — 180–200 words

This is a long-running debate, and although both approaches have something to recommend them, I am firmly in favour of starting early.

The main argument for primary school is that young children are extraordinarily receptive to new sounds and patterns. They absorb pronunciation without effort and, crucially, they are not yet self-conscious enough to be afraid of making mistakes, which is precisely what fluency requires. Children who begin Spanish at six usually end up with a more natural accent and a surer instinct for grammar than those who begin at twelve.

I do accept, however, that starting early is only useful if it is done well. Formal grammar drills with seven-year-olds achieve very little and can put a child off the language for years. Early teaching has to be built on songs, games and stories. The same is true of listening: a young ear distinguishes unfamiliar sounds that an adult learner may never hear properly at all.

Provided primary schools can offer that kind of lively, immersive teaching, I believe starting young gives children a lasting advantage and a skill they will keep for life.

TASK 1.1 · INFORMAL

Hi Jack,

Our internet provider has finally written to us. They admit there is a fault in our area and promise to repair it soon. I am relieved that they accept the problem, but I am still annoyed. They should tell us honestly when it will be fixed. Has yours improved?

Best,

Alex

TASK 1.2 · FORMAL

120–150 words

Dear Sir or Madam,

Thank you for your email acknowledging the connection problems in our area. I am glad the fault has been recognised, but I must be honest: after six weeks of an unreliable service, I am frustrated. My connection drops during video calls for work, which has caused real difficulty.

You asked what should be improved. Firstly, the equipment in our district clearly needs upgrading, as the problem affects the whole street. Secondly, customers should receive honest updates with a realistic repair date rather than general apologies. A clear explanation of what has actually gone wrong would also reassure customers far more than a standard message.

Finally, I hope you will consider some compensation for the weeks we have paid for a service we could not use.

Yours faithfully,

Alex

Exercise 10 · Model answer

PART 2

"Should schools teach practical skills such as managing money and cooking, or are traditional subjects like maths and science more important?"

TASK 2 · DISCUSSION POST 180–200 words

Should schools concentrate on practical life skills or stay with traditional academic subjects? In my view the question is wrongly posed, because students need both.

Mathematics and science remain fundamental. They train logical thinking and the habit of solving problems step by step, and that habit is useful far beyond the exam hall. Understanding basic science also helps us make sense of the world, from weather reports to the advice a doctor gives us.

At the same time, we cannot ignore how unprepared many young adults are for independent life. Knowing how to budget, how to read a contract and how to cook a decent meal affects a person's well-being every single week. I have watched friends fall into debt simply because nobody ever taught them to plan their spending. Science teaching also protects young people from the misinformation that now circulates so freely online.

The answer, therefore, is not to choose but to combine. A curriculum that keeps its academic core while making room for practical skills would serve students far better than either approach alone. These are not difficult things to teach, and a single term of lessons would be enough to cover the essentials.
